

1.1 Introduction to Readiness Leadership Development Program (RLDP)

RLDP is a Commander's program designed to enhance personal and family preparedness. This is accomplished by providing education and training in a variety of knowledge, skills, and behaviors. The goal is to significantly enhance overall readiness and to develop leaders in volunteer positions.

RLDP Forums

Online – each topic will provide basic information as a quick reference through this website. The target audience is all USMEPCOM personnel and family members.

Workshops – upon request, workshops can be conducted onsite for more extensive training in each topic. The target audience is for volunteers and personnel in leadership positions.

Resources

RLDP training materials are a combination of several documents created by:

- Department of Army Community and Family Support Center
- United States Marine Corps Personal and Family Readiness Division
- Department of Navy Personal Readiness and Community Support
- Department of Air Force Family Support Operations
- United States Coast Guard Health and Safety Division

Training materials may have been modified from the original documents to ensure a joint-service perspective. Modifications include: all services rank structure, DOD terminology, or USMEPCOM policy.
